Mrs. Milena Harito
Minister of Social Welfare & Youth Minister of Innovation and Public Administration

The Minister of Innovation and Public Administration, Mrs. Milena Harito began her speech expressing satisfaction that the first International Forum on the Creative Economy, coincides with the first Innovation week.

"During the first six months of government have made some project ideas that are 140 million dollars value. But it is clear that in this area we want to be in partnership with private business for their implementation because the digitization of many services can also be profitable. The partnership with private business will save us time in which we will implement these new services and modernize public services. We want to promote in a powerful way with private structures, especially universities," said Harito.

According to the Minister, another important role of government that facilitates this process is the transparency. In this sense, technology is what makes procedures and services transparent. So technology will leave marks in every decision making steps creates a ground that things will get better.

The Minister said that the government is creating the structure to encourage and assist students in this field, to encourage the creation of applications in order to become self-employed.
